

SAUL'S LAST BATTLE.

2 Samuel 11:4. — May 6.
Disobedience, He Asked Aid of the Witch of Endor. The Philistines, The Battle Lost—Saul and Jonathan Slain—The Song of the Bow, or Saul's Dead March—David King of Judah, Later, King of Israel.

"I John am my strength and my shield; my heart is secure in him, and I am helped."

Paul to the Romans 1:15.

PERSECUTED and hunted by King Saul, no place was safe for David. The Philistines, however, gave him a place to stay, and he was safe for a time.

Then a few gave him and his followers the city of Ziph. While residing there, David's conquests were over the Amalekites.

Meantime, the end of Saul's reign was near. A few communists have written that the army he could muster, and he felt very dubious respecting the results. Although, in his opinion, all who claimed to communicate with the dead had failed, nevertheless some remained. In his extremity, King Saul visited the Witch of Endor.

The witch got into communication with the fallen angels, who she supposed, as spiritual.

She was told that the spirits of the dead. But the witch assured her that "they know not anything." Sam uel was sleeping with his enemies, awaiting the resurrection.

Morning. Then as now, evil stalks through the earth.

King Saul, David inquiring of the dead and unanswered instead of the dead. In this case, the answer was that the next day the army of his sons would be defeated and slain.

The Bible clearly teaches that the dead are dead and can give no information, while the living are in a state of suspended animation, awaiting the better day when Messiah will bring the knowledge of God's glory to all the world, and the sacrifice at Calvary.

The teaching that the dead are alive contradicts God's Word, and is the foundation of the gnostic errors of the heretical gnostics.

None would pray for the dead or say masses for their release from Purgatory, if they knew that the dead were merely sleeping until the resurrection.

"Song of the Bow."

When David heard of the defeat, his sympathy for Saul and Jonathan was manifested in his lamentation, "How art thou fallen, O David, in the midst of thy days!"

1 Samuel 31:4-5. — May 6.

The Dead March from Saul is an attempt to put into modern music David's Song of the Bow.

In the battle, Saul and Jonathan were killed, including Jonathan, Saul himself.

Buchanan's Public Law
One hundred years ago James Buchanan, who in later life became President of the United States, was elected a member of the Legislature of Pennsylvania. This marked the beginning of the time he was affiliated with the Federal party. He disapproved of the war with England, but did not shrink the duties of an American citizen when he became a fact. He was one of the first volunteers to march to the defense of Baltimore. Mr. Buchanan retired from the legislature at the age of 21, his second year, to devote himself to a practice of law. A few years later, however, he was again elected to Congress and soon became a figure of national prominence.

Non-Retrospective

A New York salesman tells of a stay made by him at a western hotel where he observed an old-fashioned roll-top desk.

"So asked the Goethals of a man in the washroom, 'don't' the owner of this hotel know that it's against the law of the state of Illinois to use rollers to roll up desks?"

"He knows it right enough," said
the man addressed, "but that law wasn't passed when this town was settled."

"Toothache is Ancient."

It has been discovered that hundreds of years ago Columbus discovered the properties of this continent employed, not to say tolerated, dentists. And only a while ago, dental practice was unknown before Moors was found in the basket of rabbits beside the Nile.

The ancient American dentists practiced art and skill. Some of these skills have lasted to this day in skulls found in old burial mounds by Prof. M. H.
Saville of Columbus university. These skulls show the use of needles and toothache—and reveal to us the fact that these men of hundreds and thousands of years ago probably applied the skill of their dentists
about the same feelings as possess the man of today. All of which is of no particular account to the man who knows that man soon approach that dead, is it?"

HARD TO CULTIVATE

Orchid Long a Puzzle to Horticulturists.

Beautiful But Strange Flower Requires Expert Handling and a Knowledge of Surroundings in Which It is Grown.

Probably there is no flower in the whole plant kingdom which is admitted more easily to cultivation than the orchid, the development and cultivation of which are discussed by J. Constantine in a paper in the "Garden and Home." Upon entering a house filled with orchids one is literally gashed by the bizarre display, the colors and forms of the petals and the various forms of hermaphrodites.

The number of known species is greater than that of any of the related families, even the Orchidaceae and the Gramineae being 400 species, including 400 genera. This great number is, no doubt, due very largely to the diligent search which has been made to find the various species of these beauty and very great popularity. They have otherwise very little economic value, excepting a few members of the genus Phalaenopsis.

Some of the orchids are terrestrial; that is, they grow with their roots in the ground. The great majority, however, are epiphytic, which means they are epiphytes—air plants which grow on trees and shrubs, but receive no nutrition from the soil.

For most epiphytes the scheme was devised of fastening the roots to a piece of wood, together with a little moss, and then suspending the plant by means of copper wire. Plants thus prepared were in very "warm" greenhouses, and kept continually moist by frequent damping. It was found that tropical plants required an infinitely hot humid atmosphere, and it was not foreseen that mountain species of tropical regions would be treated essentially like tropical plants that are accustomed to elevated temperatures.

There are in fact many orchids, and some of these very beautiful, which grow in the neighborhood of snow. The error of associating plants from widely different environments—such as finally responsible for the difficulty which was experienced in successfully growing many species upon their introduction into the United States and Malaysia in the eighteenth century.

TO FORETELL FUTURE

USE OF WHITE OF EGG IS RECOMMENDED.

Those Who Are Tired of the Familiar Methods of Cards and Tea Grounds Might Find Some Amusement in the Practice.

This is one of the least known of the methods of prophetic insight, according to the ancient, secret wisdom of prophetic insight. Yet it is one of the most interesting, and easy to perform, though, of course, it is not one of the most skillful, skill and practice are necessary in order to interpret quickly and speedily the symbolic indications of the signs presented, writes Paul L. Lathiller in "The New American."

In order to practice this part of esoteric interpretation, you must have a white egg—such as is possible—and carefully separate the white of the egg from the yolk. Nearly all a turn of the hand will turn the cold water and drop the white of the egg into the water.

Now place this glass carefully aside for 24 hours, being sure to cover the glass carefully, and that the water does not touch the egg. After 24 hours, remove the egg and place it near a radiator, etc.

When you again look at the glass, you will see that your white of egg has condensed into a small circle of various shapes—squares, triangles, crosses, etc.—which are to be interpreted according to the formula in the following:

"You are close to the grave." said the clergymen solemnly.

The aging farmer showed little interest.

"We must all prepare," continued the clergymen, "at some time in our lives we must meet the grave."

Then the old man sat up.

"Grim reaper?" he repeated.

The clergymen nodded.

"You eat him around here."

grinned the old man, "I'll be put in the fields with the rest of the hands and he'll get his fill of reaping without bothering me!"—Washington Star

Fire for Bachelors.

"What is your attitude toward marriage?"

"Well, I have some advantages."

"For instance?"

"In the first days when a single man likes to sing little music in the evening without going out he either had to hire a pianist or marry one, but now he can buy a piano-player as a pet and make his valet do the work for him."

"The head of the shoot committee is speaking," said he.

"This is J. C. Astorl Jones—Yale '98," said the voice.

"Yes?" I'd like to enter your tournament," said the old man, "so you will shortly re-enter the sun, sun or stars denote happiness and success."

A Century Ago.
Samuel Colt, inventor of the revolver, was born 100 years ago in Hartford, Conn. He was a boy of fifteen when he made his first revolver, a model before the time, when he made his first model in wood of his celebrated repeating pistol. At the age of twenty-one he had a shop of his own, and he was then the only maker of revolvers in the world. The efforts of the government and the army and navy declined for a long time to give the revolver the place it deserved, and the first company formed for its manufacture ended in failure. But the Seminole was in Florida determined to make the revolver a success, and it was adopted by the army. Other wars in different parts of the world created a demand for the revolver, and by the time of the Civil War, the Colt revolver, with the shape of the wings gives both a lifting and propelling effect.

large numbers of predatory animals were destroyed last year by federal forest officers in the national forests. More than 1,000,000 deer, 100,000 elk, and any other animal, nearly 5,000 being killed. Wildcats were second in the casualty list; and of these 530 were killed, the death toll being 80. Other animals killed in considerable numbers were lynxes, opossums, and mountain lions. Over 40,000 birds in the Colorado forests were cleared of grizzly bears by the use of poison.

DEALING WITH THE OCCULT

Picture Fantasy, "I Were Young Again," Expected to Prove One of the Season's Successes.

Released November 16, the Selig company has a powerful reel in "I Were Young Again." The story is much that of "Faust," in that it deals with the wish, common among the old times, to be young again.

At times of overwhelming fragility, when on every hand are to be found signs of deterioration, when the body is daunted, when health is failing, when nations are stirred by great calamity, the fervor of public sentiment sometimes drives men to the most impossible conditions. Such an incident occurred in France during the French mobilization.

On August 5 a captain who was carrying his equipment stopped a cab on a crowded street, and asked the driver to take him to the Eastern railway terminus. The cab stopped at a hotel, where the captain, who was a humorist, stared sullenly at the driver and shook his head.

"It is urgent!" cried the captain. "I am late! I must get there immediately!"

Again the driver shook his head.

A crowd of bystanders witnessed the captain's frantic efforts to get into an undertone. Suddenly they rushed forward, picked up the captain, held him, equipment and all, and carried him to the hotel door. Some one pulled the driver from his seat. A man from the crowd leaped up and caught the reins. In this way the captain was carried away to the Eastern railway terminus. As he looked back, he saw the crowd cheerfully rolling the surprised man in the street—Youth's "comedy of life."

Again the driver shook his head.

This is the only way to get the ring, the annoying experience of reaching hand only to discover the keys have been left at the office, but for those who do not care to risk this, the ring can be easily attached to the important key in place of the chain. It is then easy enough to find the ring among the keys of the car. As he looked back, he saw the crowd cheerfully rolling the surprised man in the street—Youth's "comedy
